SUMMARY OF EVENTS

FOR 1884.

THE YEAR'S RECORD.

CIRCUIT OF THE WORLD'S HISTORY.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY AND COMMERCIAL DEPRESSION IN THE UNITED STATES—THE CHIEF EVENTS IN THE OLD WORLD.

1884 has been a year remarkable for political activity and commercial depression. In the United States one of the most exciting and closely fought elections has resulted in the choice of a Democratic President. In Great Britain two millions of new electors have been created by the passage of the Franchise Bill, and a conflict between the two houses has been averted through a compromise of so radical a character as to involve a revolution in the electoral system. In France there has been a partial revision of the Constitution with a reorganization of the Senatorial electorate. The German Chancellor has interested himself in schemes for colonial extension, annexing territory in South Africa and the South Seas. France has continued its campaign of reprisals with China, and England has been gradually drawn into the Soudan after irresolute and ill-advised attempts to evade the responsibilities incurred at Tel-el-Kebir.

UNITED STATES.

The American year may be summed up in two comprehensive politics and depression. There has been a protracted expansion of political activity and excitement, and a corresponding contraction and shrinkage of confidence in the business community. When the record of the year is critically studied, it is difficult to resist the conclusion that in this instance politics and depression stand somewhat in the relation of cause and effect. Over-production and other related causes have been operating likewise, but political uncertainty and legislative contingencies have had an important influence in coloring men's minds and affecting the currents of industrial exchange.

Two causes, distinctively political, combined at the opening of the year to create uneasiness and to stimulate speculative spirit in business circles. One was the agitation for tariff reductions, the effects and bearings of which business men could not forecast. The other was the continued effect of the Silver act in expanding circulation without reason or necessity. The uncertainties respecting the scope and fate of the Morrison Tariff bill, the neglect of Congress to repeal the Silver act, and the apprehensions caused by the approach of a Presidential election, in which one of the great parties must be arrayed in hostility to the economic system of the country, were political causes that had a most disquieting effect upon the business community. The previous year had been one of gloomy forecasts and careful, cautious had a most disquieting effect upon the business community. The previous year had been one of gloomy forecasts and careful, cautious calculation on the part of prudent men, and there had been a protracted period of shrinkages in values, during which great lusses had been suffered without signs of panic feeling or any lack of steadiness. The conditions were very different from those which preceded the panic of 1873. The consequence was that the collapse of the Northern Pacific, the bankruptcy of the North River Construction Company, the depreciation in Western Union and many other stocks, the failure of J. R. Keene, the pricking of the bubble enterprise of Grant & Ward, the closing of the Marine Bank and the crippling of the Metropolitan Bank, did not involve a general catastrophe. There was a stock-brokers' panic (May 14) and nothing more, and the mercantile world was not seriously affected. It marked the close of a period of unsound finance and hazardous speculation, which had been directly promoted by political rather than general causes like over-production and bad trade. The danger was speedily averted by the resolution of the city banks to stand together and use Clearing House loan certificates as in 1873. The business community did not receive a severe shock from the crash, and the panic, such as it was, was speedily forgotten. Yet the depressed feeling with which the year opened has continued and is more intense at the close than it was at the beginning. There is no economic cause that explains it so well as the uncertainties involved by the issue of the Presidential election and the apprehensions due to the transfer of power from one party unreservedly committed to the support of the present economic system to another whose attitude is one either of open or covert hostility to Protection.

Congress adjourned (July 7) after a prolonged term of legislative inactivity and mischievous debate. Of 10,255 bills and resolutions introduced about 128 were actually passed, and scarcely any of these were or real imp reduction of newspaper postage were among the more important adopted by both houses. The Dingley Shipping bill would have been a useful measure if it had not been saddled with amendments. The Senate passed several valuable bills providing for the increase of the Navy postal telegraphy, and the issue of notes by National banks equal to the face value of the bonds deposited for their redemption; but these were killed by the House. The Morrison Tariff bill by a vote of 140 to 138 was taken up (April 15) after a long period of vacillation and caucus deliberation, and it was defeated (May 6) by a vote of 159 to 155, the more sagacious Democrats apparently dreading the effect of its passage upon the fortunes of their party in a Presidential year. The sympathies of a great majority of the Democratic delegation were plainly with the ideas and projects of pronounced Free Traders like Speaker Carlisle, Mr. Morrison, Mr. Hurd and Mr. Dorsheimer. The chief appropriation bills did not reach the Senate until June, owing to the dilatory habits of the House Committees. The appropriations voted were fully $20,000,000 in excess of those of the previous year.

The Senatorial contests early in the year had been exceptionally free from bitterness. Mr. Pugh was re-elected from Alabama, Mr. Brown from Georgia, Mr. Allison from Iowa and Mr. Morrill from Vermont. In Ohio Mr. Payne was elected and Mr. Pendleton, the only Democrat prominently identified with Civil Service reform, was relegated to private life. In Maryland Mr. Eustis in place of Mr. Jonas. In Kentucky there were twenty ballots, Mr. Blackburn finally being elected to suceed Mr. Williams. These contests were of minor importance and the legislative proceedings in the State capitals were not of special interest, except perhaps the series of reform measures for New-York City which were enacted through the industry and patience of Mr. Roosevelt.

The Presidential conventions were of such absorbing import-of Mr. Roosevelt.

The Presidential conventions were of such absorbing importance that no other political events are entitled to serious mention. The Republican National Convention was held during the first week of June ance that no other political events are entitled to serious mention. The Republican National Convention was held during the first week of June and Mr. Blaine was nominated on the fourth ballot. On the first ballot he received 334½ votes, of which 251 came from Northern States. His vote increased from 349 on the second to 375 on the third ballot; and on the final ballot he received 541 votes, of which 400 came from Northern States. President Arthur's vote ranged from 278 to 207; Mr. Edmunds's vote from 93 to 41; and Mr. Logan, Mr. Hawley, Mr. Sherman, Mr. Lincoln and General Sherman shared the scattering vote. Mr. Logan was nominated for Vice-President. The nominations were made without the unit rule or any process of stifling or misrepresenting minorities. The Convention methods were without taint of suspicion and the candidates represented the deliberate choice of delegates elected for the most part in single districts where the voters had given expression to their personal preferences. The Democratic Convention was held in July, and offered a marked contrast in one respect to the Republican Convention, since the unit rule prevailed and the votes of minorities were arbitrarily cast for candidates whom they denounced. Mr. Cleveland lacked 155 votes on the first ballot and on the second received 136 more than were required. His chief competitor was Mr. Bayard, who received 168 votes on the first ballot. Mr. Thurman, Mr. Randall, Mr. McDonald, Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Hendricks divided the scattering vote. The result was received with extreme dissatisfaction by General Butler and the Tammany delegation as an affront to the working classes. General Butler subsequently entered the field as a third candidate and ex-Governor St. John was nominated by the Prohibitionists. nominated by the Prohibitionists.

THE POLITICAL CAMPAIGN.

The campaign which followed was one of exceptional bitterness and passion, to the details of which it is hardly necessary to refer in a review of events so fresh in the public mind. Mr. Blaine's Letter of Acceptance raised the discussion on the Republican side to the high level of political principles and economic controversy. No issues of the Acceptance raised the discussion on the Republican side to the high level of political principles and economic controversy. No issues of the canvass were shirked by him or his followers; protection was declared to be the one commanding theme of the canvass; and there was no doubt in any voter's mind as to where the Republican leader stood on any public question of the day. The Democratic candidate was more careful of his words, omitting to write a single line upon the tariff question in his Letter of Acceptance and remaining throughout the canvass under cover, apparently mindful of the critical mistakes made by his predecessor in 1880. The preliminary stages of the contest were all in favor of the Republicans, Vermont, Maine and Ohio being carried by good majorities in the State elections. The final result proved unexpectedly close, the election depending upon the electoral vote of New-York State with a narrow majority of something over a thousand votes in favor of Mr. Cleveland. A well-fought campaign in which the Republicans had been aided by the presence of a leader who strengthened their cause wherever he appeared was lost in the end by a series of trivial accidents, such as an ill-timed and intolerant alliterative phrase that alienated thousands of votes.

The bearing of the American people in the scenes of uncertainty and series of trivial accidents, such as an ill-timed and intolerant alliterative phrase that alienated thousands of votes.

The bearing of the American people in the scenes of uncertainty and excitement following the election was admirable. It was the more remarkable since the campaign had been one of rancorous defamation and acrimonious partisanship. The steadiness of judgment and self-possession of the people carried them easily through a crisis which in France would have ended in revolution and bloodshed. The notorious fact that Mr. Cleveland had been elected only by the suppression of the negro vote in the Southern States did not tempt Republicans to tamper with the recorded verdict of the Northern States. The sense of injustice was very keen; the election had demonstrated that with the South solid through the effacement of the Republican vote the Democrats had only to carry two Northern States in order to secure the Presidency; and the significance of this fact was apparent even before Mr. Blaine directed attention to it in his speech at Augusta after his defeat. But while the Republicans could not hope for justice and fair play in the South, they had no desire to have the will of the North misrepresented by any expedients that would not bear the light. While the Presidency had been lost by narrow majorities in Indana, New Jersey, Connecticut and New-Yerk, the Republicans had made material gains in both houses of Congress. From California and Oregon Republican Senators will be elected to succeed Democratis, and even with Illinois a tie and left in doubt, the roll will stand Republicans, 41; Democrats, 34. In the next House the Republicans will have 141 members in place of 119, and the Democrats 181 in place of 200. This gain reduces the chances of a successful renewal of tariff agitation. tation.

A NEW COMMERCIAL POLICY.

The political canvass not only interrupted the natural course of business, but created general uneasiness on the subject of the tarift and the economic consequences of Democratic success. pressing influence has not passed away since the election. The report to deepen this feeling, and the series of commercial treaties announced in the President's Message has added to the uncertainty. The most imin the President's Message has added to the uncertainty. The most important of these treaties proposes a reduction of from $25,000,000 in revenue by the importation of free sugar and tobacco at lower rates in American or Spanish bottoms from Cuba and Porto Rico, in return for favors supposed to be reciprocal extended to exports from the United States to Cuba. This treaty will have important effects upon American manufactures of tobacco and the production and refining of sugar, which cannot easily be calculated. A similar treaty has been concluded with Santo Domingo. The commercial treaty with Mexico, ratified by the Senate last March, still awaits tariff legislation by Congress to be rendered effective. The President's Message advocated the extension of American trade by treaties of this kind, the establishment of the consular service on a salaried footing, the development of a steam carrying marine, and a uniform currency basis for this continent. A treaty far more startling in its provisions is that concluded with Nicaragua, whereby the United States Government contracts to build an inter-oceanic canal and to defend the territory through which it passes. These treaties have diverted public attention from Congress since the opening of the session. If either the canal be undertaken or commercial reciprocity with Mexico, Cuba and South American countries be sanctioned, the surplus revenues of the Government will be absorbed and one of the Democratic arguments in favor of tariff tinkering will lose its force. That surplus for the next fiscal year is estimated at $39,000,000.

CHANGES, TENDENCIES AND CRIMES.

The Cabinet changes of the year include the appointment of Mr. McCulloch to the Treasury (October 31) in place of Mr. Gresham, who succeeded Mr. Folger (deceased, September 5). Mr. Hatton became Mccunioen to the Treasury (October 31) in place of Mr. Gresham, who succeeded Mr. Folger (deceased, September 5). Mr. Hatton became Postmaster-General in October. The principal diplomatic changes have been the transfer of Mr. Francis to Vienna, Mr. Kasson to Berlin, and Mr. Taft to St. Petersburg. The Bartholdi Statue was formally presented to the American people on July 4 at Paris and accepted by the American Minister. The International Meridian Conference, composed of delegates from twenty-five countries, closed its labors at Washington (November 1) by agreeing upon the Greenwich meridian as the starting point and fixing a universal day with hours counted from zero to 24. The International Cotton Exposition at New-Orleans, supported by Government grants, was opened in December.

The year has been characterized by an unusual number of defaults, embezzlements and betrayals of public trusts. This has been one of the results of the speculative spirit with which business has been conducted, and great shrinkages of values in the stock list. There have been some alarming exhibitions of lawlessness, notably the riot in Cincinnati (March 29), during which an attempt was made to lynch murderers confined in the jail and the Court House was burned, 100 persons being killed and wounded. This outbreak was the direct result of a series of shameful miscarriages of justice, public indignation taking the form of passionate revolt against law. The army has had happily a complete respite from Indian depredations in the West. The navy has had a serious undertaking and a crowning success in the rescue of the Greely party at Cape Sabine and the recovery of the flag which had been carried nearer to the Pole than the colors of the English expedition under Sir George Nares.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Political activity and peaceful revolution at home and confusion, menace and uncertainty abroad are the characteristics of the English year. By the passage of the Franchise Bill two millions of the Queen's subjects have been armed with the ballot, and by the Redistribution Bill, which has been practically agreed upon as a compromise measure, although it has not been formally enacted as a law. little less than a revolution has been accomplished in the representative system of Great Britain. These great results have been accompanied by vacillation, irresolution and incapacity in the conduct of foreign affairs, which have impaired the prestige of the Nation abroad. Parliament met (February 5) at a critical juncture in Egyptian affairs, when the public were not prepared to consider seriously the large legislative proposals outlined in the Queen's Address. These related to the assimilation of the conditions of suffrage in countries and boronghs, the extension and reform of local government, the unification of the metropolis, and minor measures for the security of life and property at sea, the extension of the Railway Commission, and the extension of metropolis, and minor measures for the security of life and property at sea, the extension of the Railway Commission, and the extension of the Corrupt Practices act to municipal elections. Foreign complications involving protracted debates on motions of censure, coupled with systematic obstruction by the Opposition in both Houses, reduced this legislative programme to a single measure—the Franchise Bill. This was introduced by Mr. Gladstone (February 28) in a powerful and conciliatory speech, appealing at once to the common sense of the Liberals and to the patriotism of the Opposition. He defended the measure as one that would strengthen the State by creating new classes of citizens, whose political capacity had already been tested by fifteen years' experience acquired in the boronghs. Those to be enfranchised in the counties corresponded closely to the classes of population in the towns upon whom the franchise had been conferred in 1867. Mr. Gladstone's proposal was to leave the ancient-right household and lodger franchises as they are in the boroughs, and to extend them by applying Gladstone's proposal was to leave the ancient-right household and lodger franchises as they are in the boroughs, and to extend them by applying the ten-pound yearly franchise to the occupation of land without houses or buildings, and by creating a franchise for servants, who are neither owners nor tenants, yet fulfil the idea of inhabiting householders. The borough franchise modified in this way he extended to the counties throughout the United Kingdom. The franchise was practically equalized in borough and county, and Ireland was placed on a level of political equality with England and Scotland. The Franchise Bill was at once large in its effects and progressive in spirit, yet curiously conservative in adhering to ancient principles. It prohibited the creation of fagot voters in future, but did not abolish existing privileges of this nature. of this nature.

THE TWO HOUSES.

The debate on the second reading of the Franchise bill was begun (March 24) with animation, but gradually the interest in it declined, owing to the distractions of foreign affairs. The majority for the second reading was unexpectedly large, the chief amendment having been previously defeated by a vote of 280 to 167. The third reading occurred June 26, Mr. Gladstone in closing the debate affirming that the Government had made every effort to satisfy reasonable demands of the Opposition, and warning the country that the conflict between the two houses would be the most serious one since the abolition of the Corn Laws. The Lords gave no heen to the warning, but rejected the Franchise Bill (July 8) on the second reading by a vote of 205 to 146. Mr. Gladstone at once announced that an autumn session would be held, that the Franchise Bill would be reintroduced and that no Redistribution Bill, the presentation of which the Lords had demanded, wend do be brought forward until the chief measure had become a law. Parliament adjourned (August 14) without having accomplished any important work beyond disposing of the budget appropriations. There had been the usual Bradlaugh scenes and prolonged discussions of foreign questions and the Franchise Bill; but the Government measures had not been advanced. The debate on the Address alone occupied fourteen nights. The failure to act upon the London bill was most unfortunate since it was a most ingenious measure and had been introduced by Sir William Harcourt in a most lucid and statesmanlike speech. reading was unexpectedly large, the chief amendment having been prespeech.

After the adjournment of Parliament a series of great meetings was held in England and Scotland in favor of the Frauchise Bill, and an agitation against the House of Lords in many localities became a popular movement. Mr. Gladstone went to Midlothian in August to give an account of his four and a half years' of administration, and was most enthusiastically received. His speeches showed no lack of firmness, but were conservative in tone. The Conservative orators were active during the vacation. Mr. Parnell was more quiet than usual, apparently occupying himself with preparations for the general elections, in which he hopes to increase his power. The Irish members have acted with sagacity in accepting the Reform Bill and the Redistribution scheme, since it is safe for them to count upon great Nationalist gains with 400,000 additional electors in the island. Their speeches in and out of Parliament have been more moderate in tone, and while not betckening any signs of conciliation have given less offence to Englishmen than in previous years. The influence of wise leadership has been marred by the plots of dynanuite fanatics, who in February sought to shatter three railway stations in London, and in May succeeded in exploding large quantities of nitro-glycerine in Scotland Yard and in St. James Square, and finally in December planned the destruction of London Bridgo. These outrages were not traced to any source, but naturally were attributed in England to the machinations of Irish extremists.

THE COMPROMISE.

At the opening of the autumn session (October 23) the speeches of the leaders in Opposition gave no promise of concessions to the majority of the popular house. Lord Salisbury sternly refused to accept the Franchise Bill unless it should be accompanied by a scheme of Redistribution. This point he eventually carried. The Franchise Bill was rapidly advanced to the third reading in the Commons and sent to the Lords, where after being read twice it was practically hung up in Committee of the whole house. Mr. Gladstone after making repeated advances finally accepted a compromise, which virtually admitted Lord Salisbury into his Cabinet. By the terms of this compromise the Lords agreed to pass the Franchise Bill, if the Government would intro-

Lords agreed to pass the Franchise Bill, if the Government would introduce a Redistribution Bill that would be satisfactory to the Conservative leaders. So far as practical results were concerned this was a great gain since it secured the passage of the Franchise Bill and, a large method of dealing with Redistribution. The question, however, whether the majority in the Commons should yield to the majority in the Lords, or vice versa, was decided in favor of a Chamber that is not responsible to any body of electors.

The Redistribution Bill was introduced by Mr. Gladstone in the Commons (December 1) and passed to a second reading the same week without a division. On the same day the Franchise Bill was reported to the House of Lords without amendment and was signed by the Queen (December 6). Parliament adjourned to February 10, with the understanding that the Redistribution Bill would then be taken up for general discussion. The general purpose of this measure is to give a more adequate representation to the counties, where the number of electors has been greatly increased by the Franchise Bill. A subordinate object is to strengthen the representation of the large boroughs at the expense has been greatly increased by the Franchise Bill. A subordinate object is to strengthen the representation of the large boroughs at the expense of the small boroughs. The number of county members is nareased from 269 to 365. The total number of members is raised from 658 to 670. To these 12 new seats are added 148, obtained by distranchising boroughs in whole or in part. Boroughs having less than 15,000 in population lose their seats—97 in all; two single-seat boroughs and six boroughs with double seats lose 14 additional seats; boroughs having less than 50,000 inhabitants are deprived of their second members—37 in all; these 148 seats with the 12 new ones making 160, of which 96 are given to the countries and 64 to large towns, having making 160, of which 96 are given to the counties and 64 to large towns, new boroughs receiving 8 seats from the counties. Equal electoral districts are virtually established in all the counties and all the great boroughs, a rule based on ratio of population being adopted in the new electoral divisions and the principle of a single member for each district being generally introduced. England receives 6 and Scotland 12 additional seats, the representation of Ireland and Wales remaining unchanged. This is a larger measure than any Ministry could have introduced alone, without an understanding with the Opposition; and on this account the compromise has been a most fortunate result for the British electorate. Opinions as to the political effects of the scheme differ widely, the leaders on both sides claiming positive gains at the next general election, the Conservatives counting upon increasing their representation from the large boroughs and counties, and the Liberals anticipating a revolution in the counties in consequence of the creation of pating a revolution in the counties in consequence of the creation of 2,000,000 new electors. The Radicals are sorely disappointed in the abandonment of the principle of proportional or minority representation, Mr. Courtney having resigned office and united with Sir Wilfrid Lawson and others in organizing meetings in opposition to the measure,

BRITISH DEPENDENCIES.

Egypt has been the great theatre where the Liberal Ministry in Egypt has been the great theatre where the Liberal Ministry in England have displayed their incapacity for accepting the inevitable consequences of their own acts. From the day when Arabi's army was routed at Tel-el-Kebir that Ministry became responsible for the future of the Nile Valley, above as well as below Cairo. That responsibility they persistently shirked, entertaining the vain hope that the Egyptians would prove capable of governing themselves in accordance with European ideas and that the English garrison might speedily be withdrawn. They refused to assert their authority in a positive way to restore financial order, to recast Egyptian methods of administration and to prohibit campaigns of reckless adventure. When the Khedive and his Ministers decided to send an army of unwilling military slaves into the heart of the Soudan to reconquer Kordofan, the English Ministry advised against the undertaking, but did not take measures to prevent it. At the opening of the year they had to face the consequences of their halting, half-hearted policy. The massacre of Hicks's army had kindled an insurrection in the Soudan and placed every Egyptian garrison in peril. The English Ministry adopted the speediest measures for making that insurrection general and increasing the peril of every garrison. They decided to abandon the Soudan and abruptly proclaimed the new policy, forcing the Egyptian Ministry to resign. No sooner had they taken this step than they found that it was impracticable to withdraw the garrisons. Suakim, Tokar, Sinkat, Kassala, Berber, Khartoum and all the Upper Nile ports became centres of local disaffection and the garrisons were hemmed in. The English Ministry showed painful signs of irresolution and vacillation, and finally allowed a cowardly body of ill-organized Nubian troops to go to the rescue of the seaboard garrisons, and dispatched two men, General Gordon and Colonel Stewart, across the Korosco desert to reinforce the Khartoum garrison. The Hubian troops under Baker Pacha were attacked (Fe England have displayed their incapacity for accepting the inevitable

BLOODSHED IN THE SOUDAN.

Under the pressure of a motion of censure proposed in the Commons, the British Ministry sent General Graham with 5,000 men to Suakim to relieve the garrison at Tokar. The greater part of the garrison surrendered before the arrival of the troops, and the expedition was converted into an agency of punishment and massacre instead of relief. General Graham, advancing from the coast toward Tokar, met the enemy 12,000 Graham, advancing from the coast toward Tokar, met the enemy 12,000 strong (March 1), and after a furiously contested battle at EI Teb, in which the Soudanese displayed amazing bravery, defeated them and massacred 2,300 men. The troops entered Tokar and rescued a miserable remnant of the garrison, and then marched toward Sinkat, defeating Osman Digna's forces a second time near Tamanieb (March 13) and leaving 3 000 Arabs slain on the field of battle. The army advanced inland to Osman Digna's chief village and burned it. Then finding it impracticable to march across the desert to Berber and to open a road for the garrison of Khartoum, General Graham's army returned to Lower Egypt. All this bloodshed was without practical-result. Only a handful of cowardly soldiers had been rescued in return for the 7,000 Arabs and 3,000 Nubians slaughtered. The seaboard was conquered after the policy of evacuation had been proclaimed, and conquered only to be abandoned straightway. At the very moment when General Gordon was proclaiming peace and good-will at Khartoum, a British army on the coast was slaughtering Arabs by the thousand.

GORDON AT KHARTOUM.

General Gordon leaving England (January 20) had meanwhite made a perilous journey across the desert to Berber and Khartoum, the camel which carried him bearing, as was graphically said at the time. the fortunes of the British Ministry. In his first proclamations he promised that he would not interfere with slavery, and recognized the Mahdi as the Sultan of Kordofan. His original instructions contemplated an immediate abandonment of Khartoum, but as modified at Cairo they left him free to organize some form of native government before leaving the country. His genius for dealing with semi-civilized races being self-regulating, he speedily became a law unto himself, subject only to the restraints of his own conscience. By the middle of March he had not only established his authority in Khartoum, but taken the field against the hostile Soudanese. In his first battle he was unsuccessful owing to the treachery of two Pachas whom he immediately sentenced to death. The Mahdi rejected the appointment of Sultan of Kordofan and instigated a hostile movement of the natives. General Gordon besought the Ministry to appoint Zebehr Governor of Eastern Soudan, as the only native chief possessing sufficient authority to establish a government that would survive the withdrawal of the Egyptian garrison. The Ministry refused to do this and decided against immediate efforts to relieve Khartoum. General Gordon was left to his own resources. He was cut off from communication with Cairo, Berber being attacked and captured by the rebels. Khartoum was invested early in April and one-half of the population went over to the enemy. General Gordon issued bills, which the merchants took upon his personal guarantee, and in this way had money for soldiers and for supplies. He raised an army by promising freedom to negroes. He protected that army from the assaults of a superior force by planting torpedoes in front of his lines. He converted river steamers into marine fortresses by plating them with iron and building towers on them. In various ways he waged war so energetically that the siege was raised after three months. Descending the river he set fire to Berber, and sent Colonel Stewart in a steamer to open communications with Cairo. Hi the fortunes of the British Ministry. In his first proclamations he promised that he would not interfere with slavery, and recognized the Egypt. What will be done with General Gordon or what disposition will be made of Khartoum, if Lord Wolseley succeeds in reaching the place, are questions which nobody in England seems able to answer.

The British Ministry have been subjected to continuous criticism by their inglorious policy in Egypt. The first motion of censure was defeated in the Commons by a vote of 311 to 262 (February 9), and the second motion in March by a vote of 303 to 275, Mr. Forster and other Liberals abstaining from voting and the Parnellites joining the Tories. The financial situation of Egypt has grown steadily worse, and the Liberal Government have been unable to obtain the consent of Europe to a modification of the Law of Liquidation. The Conference of the Powers proved futile even after humiliating concessions had been made to France, and the recent proposals of the British Ministry have failed to secure the attention of the Powers. Payments to the Sinking Fund under the Law of Liquidation ceased on September 17, the Egyptian treasury paying the guaranteed interest instead of allowing the Caisse to use certain revenues for the benefit of the bondholders. The Powers have protested against this innovation, and England is hampered in every way by Europe in restoring financial order in Egypt.

OTHER COLONIAL DEPENDENCIES.

The British Government have had also serious trouble in dealing with Europeans and natives in South Africa. The Boers are both restless and faithless and are constantly instigating dissensions beyond their frontiers. On the side of Zululand they are aiming to reach the sea and frontiers. On the side of Zululand they are aiming to reach the sea and are encouraging the settlers beyond the reserve to assert independence of the British Crown. On the side of Bechuanaland the Boers are secretly abetting filibustering and marauding and opposing the authority of the Crown. The Cape Ministers having failed to settle this controversy peaceably, the Home Go vernment have sent Sir Charles Warren with a small expedition to restore order.

In Australia the same want of steadiness in British policy has involved vacillation and delay in the annexation of New-Guinea and enabled Germany to secure a foothold on the island and on the adjacent groups. British prestige has been impaired in every quarter of the world by faint-hearted counsels and a lack of vigor and resolution.

In India Lord Ripon has given place to Lord Dufferin as Viceroy after well-meant but futile attempts to institute reforms that are obnoxious to the British residents. The movement in favor of Australian federation is rapidly gaining ground. The Dominion of Cánada has had an uneventful year, marked by bitter political prosecutions, Government railroad transactions of remarkable magnitude, and a session of the British Association—the first ever held outside the United Kingdom.

FRANCE.

France is still pursuing a dangerous policy of reprisals abroad. After a delay of three months active operations in Tonquin were resumed. and Bacninh was captured (March 12), General Millot threatening the fortress in front while General Negrier attacked it on the other side. The Chinese garrison retreated to the frontier without striking a blow. The French troops returning to Sontay advanced to Honghoa and occupied it (April 13) without meeting with serious resistance. M. Ferry, adopting his usual course, demanded an indemnity and menaced the Chinese coast with a visitation of the fleet. The Empress-Regent was forced to make a decision and resolved upon an inglorious peace. Li Hung Chang negotiated a treaty (May 11) in which the claim for the indemnity was withdrawn and the French protectorate of Anam and Tonquin was conceded, together with important trading privileges with Yunnan and other provinces. M. Ferry had won a conspicuous triumph. A province with 11,000,000 subjects had virtually been ceded to France. But success due chiefly to audacity and recklessness tempted him to persevere in his policy of menace and reprisal. The assault of a body of Chinese irregular troops upon a French column of 700 men near Langson (June 23) was declared to be a flagrant violation of the treaty recently concluded, and an enormous indemnity was demanded. Resistance to a demand based upon an accident for which the French commanders have been shown to be chiefly responsible has involved a resumption of hostilities.

The French meet bombarded Foochow, destroyed the arsenal and forts on the Min River, and then took possession of Kelung, in Formosa.

The French fleet bombarded Foochow, destroyed the arsenal and forts on the Min River, and then took possession of Kelung, in Formosa. M. Ferry insisted while proposing a vote of credit for Tonquin operations that he was not making war with China but only securing pledges for an indemnity that would eventually be paid. The operations of his fleet did not have the effect of intimidating China, although the demonstration against Formosa was repeated. The French troops in Tonquin were forced to act on the defensive in October, and although the blockade of portions of the coast has been maintained the war party in Pekin has been able to reject all proposals for peace, even when broached under the guise of English mediation. The negotiations have apparently been broken off, and the French Government will be forced either to continue its desultory naval operations or to strike for Pekin. Warlike operations in Madagascar have not been actively resumed, although French influence is steadily gaining ground. Tunns is rapidly being converted into a province, the capitulations having been suspended, and the treasury having passed under the control of a French agent.

being converted into a province, the capitulations having been suspended, and the treasury having passed under the control of a French agent.

M. Ferry, while staggering under the burdens of foreign campaigning, has contrived to secure the support of the Chambers and to undertake the responsible duty of revising the Constitution and the Senatorial electoral system. Revision was approached cautiously and under limitations carefully defined in advance. The National Assembly completed its work (August 13) without departing from the lines laid for its action. There were disorderly exhibitions of Radical turbulence, but the contract between the Chambers was not violated. The changes in the fundamental law were not sweeping in character. The Princes were declared ineligible for military or civil office, and the Senatorial electorate was brought within the scope of subsequent legislation. This legislation has rapidly followed. The Government's bill for the reorganization of the Senate has been adopted by both Chambers. The Deputies unfertook to amend it by providing for the election of all Senators by departmental household suffrage. This amendment was rejected by the Senate and the Deputies were forced to yield under penalty of receiving M. Ferry's resignation. The Senate hereafter will not have seventy-five life members, but will be an elective assembly, the electoral bodies consisting of the Council-General of the Department and a contingent of delegates chosen by the communal councils on the basis of population. Universal suffrage will be directly responsible for the Deputies and indirectly responsible for the Senators.

M. Ferry's success in governing is largely to be ascribed to the impracticability of obtaining a substitute for him. There are many signs of dissatisfaction with his foreign policy and compromises in domestic legislation. But M. Brisson does not venture to take the Premiership, and no other statesman is willing to assume the responsibility for conducting the Tonquin negotiations. M. Ferry is also under the continuous pressure of an enormous debt and the most expensive military system in Europe. Pestilence, too, has left its brand upon three of the great centres of population and intensified the general feeling of depression.

THE MILITARY EMPIRES.

The German Chancellor has entered during the year upon a new policy of colonial extension. Whether he has become envious of the prestige gained by France abroad, or has considered the establishment of colonies necessary from an economic point of view, is an open question; but having once taken this new departure he has displayed characteristic energy in following it out. He first established a claim to Angra Pequena, on the West African coast, and after a prolonged correspondence with Lord Granville has secured the annexation of a long strip of coast. In the German Parliament he has defended this polley on the broad ground that protection is due to colonists wherever they may be and no matter low few may be their number nor how inconsiderable their resources. He protested against England's treaty with Portugal respecting the lower Congo, and summoned to Berlin an International Council to determine the future of vast areas of Central Africa. This Conference has defined the Congo basin as including 2,000,000 miles of territory under the control of an International Commission, and has empowered England to control the lower Niger and France the upper reaches of the river. Prince Bismarck's closing achievement in the year is the annexation of a portion of New-Guinea and two adjacent islands in the South Seas—a step which has caused alarm in Australia and irritation in England. The diplomacy of Germany is now markedly hostile to England and the opposition to the financial proposals for Egypt originates in Berlin.

The political situation of Germany remains unchanged. The Parliamentary elections have made slight alterations in the relations of parties and the groups are at once unstable and helpless. The Chancellor does not hesitate to show his contempt for the Reichstag, even if he has to put an unnecessary affront upon a nation which has millions of citizens of German birth. The Lasker resolution passed by the House of Representatives and addressed to the Reichstag was unceremonously returned to Washington, and a fusillade of abuse was directed against the American Minister at Berlin. In like manner the Reichstag delights to harass and alunoy him by giving unbroken support to Herr Windthorst's resolutions in f of colonies necessary from an economic point of view, is an open question; but having once taken this new departure he has displayed charac-land, and has, moreover, made stealthy advances toward India. In February the Turcoman tribes occupying the oasis of Merv submitted to the Czar. This brought the Russian arms within 250 miles of Herat, in Western Afghanistan. During the remainder of the year a closer approach was silently made and England has been startled within a fortnight by the anonuncement that the tribes about Herat have acknowledged the Russian suprement.

night by the anonuncement that the tribes about Herat have acknowledged the Russian supremacy.

In Hungary the reform of the Upper House has been undertaken as a Government measure. The rejection of the bill for legalizing marriages between Christians and Jews after it had passed the popular Chamber seemed to render this action indispensable, and the Emperor proposed a reform measure in his speech from the throne in October. The Government's plan gives the balance of power to the Emperor's candidates and reconstitutes the House so that it will consist of hereditary peers owning at least $15,000 in land, of ecclesiastical and other functionaries, and of life-peers, the latter forming one-third of the entire body. The Coantion Cabinet in Austria has had an uneventful year. The diplomacy of the Empire has been shaped from Berlin. Bosnia has remained quiet. In East Roumelia there have been some signs of disturbance in the agitation in favor of union with Bulgaria, but the Balkan pennsula is tranquil at the close of the year. Balkan peninsula is tranquil at the close of the year.

MINOR COUNTRIES.

The financial situation of Italy is becoming more stable with every advancing year, and the condition of the people more prosperous. The Ministry have had a secure support from the Chambers, but no remarkable measures have been brought forward. The Government has secured some additional concessions for colonial development on the western coast of the Red Sea and are casting hungry eyes in the direction of Abyssinia. Commercial extension is now the besetting weakness of Europe, and Italy, which is always sensitive respecting its position as one of the great Powers, is moving in the same direction and is inclined to look favorably upon an English alliance. The Pope has been greatly disturbed by a judgment of the Court of Appeals taking from the Vatican the power of disposing of the property of the Propaganda. Cholera has proved a terrible scourge in Naples and Genoa, but has not obtained a foothold in either Rome, Florence or Venice.

The Liberals in Belgium were defeated at the general elections and a Reactionary Ministry was formed. An educational law was speedily passed conferring special privileges upon clerical tutors. This law was promptly sanctioned by the King notwithstanding the turbulent demonstrations of the Brussels and Antwerp mobs.

By the death of the Prince of Orange (June 21) Princess Wilhelmina, age four, has become heir presumptive to the throne. She cannot mherit the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg, to which the succession is regulated by the German law. Special provisions for a regency and for the succession to the Duchy have accordingly been made by the Crown and the Legislature. Ministry have had a secure support from the Chambers, but no remark-

Crown and the Legislature.

The Spanish Ministry early in the year, under a vote of censure The Spanish Ministry early in the year, under a vote of censure carried by 221 to 126, were forced to resign. Sagasta expected to become Premier, but the King passed him over and appointed Canovas del Castillo with a Conservative Ministry. The Ministry have displayed unworted activity in making proposals for commercial treaties with the United States, Great Britain and other countries. The year closes with a terrible catastrophe—the most destructive earthquake since that of Lisbon.

The Mexican people have elected General Diaz President and have reason to expect a more practical and progressive administration of public affairs. A peaceable revolution was effected by the rejection of the Government's programme providing for the public debt. Ministries have ordinarily been able to carry any measure, no matter how unwise or unpopular. A bold stand was made against the Ministers and the minority forced the withdrawal of the scheme. There has been no marked change in South American affairs. Chili has acquired the territory ceded by its vanquished foes. The Panama Canal is proceeding slowly, all the estimates in regard to cost and time required for construction being at fault. struction being at fault.
